Young Jerrod Conroy is set on a painful journey of self-discovery, which eventually leads to experiencing love and what it means. From innocent childhood to the uplifting experiences of college life, Jerrod begins to understand himself and what friendship means. In the hardened reality of commando duty, Jerrod experiences death and other tragedies in his life. Forget Me Not, a fascinating and beautiful Korean woman, leaves her family to be with Jerrod, a man she believes is not like the men in her country. She loathes gender inequality.
